“ We have so many great memories of family gatherings at the Ingratta home where Emmett often offered more than a few jokes or funny stories to the evening and always shared that beautiful smile of his! We don't ever recall him not smiling. We offer our condolences to the entire Quinlan family and pray that he is now at peace and smiling in the heavens watching over his beautiful family.

“ We have many memories of Emmett after knowing him all of his life. Out of seven children the three of us grew up together as the four much older boys were married and raising their families. We got along pretty good but occasionally we would get to squabbling which Ma would quickly end. Something about a razor strap that hung on the door to the upstairs.

Anna and I were very jealous when Emmett got to go to the Michigan State Fair. He came home with a tin horn that he would toot continuously just to tease us. As teens Emmett had a car which he would let us use but we always knew that it would be out of gas. Another story involves the three of us, Dad sending us to keep the cows in the pasture, corn stocks, mice and Emmett with a 22 rifle. We will say no more.

Anna will miss walking over to his house sharing stories and laughter. I will miss our getting together to reminisce about the past, complain about the changing world but mostly to be together and enjoying our friendship.

Until we meet again

“ Can you ever recall seeing Emmett without a beer in his hand? Well, at Max's and my wedding reception at brother Ray's home I had a keg of Bud now one of Canada best sellers available for Emmett along with all my other Canadian Quinlan relatives. About an hour in I got word that we ran out of whiskey. So, during my reception I had to run out to a liquor store to restock the supply. The next day as Tom, Max and I were cleaning up Ray's yard we were all drinking what seemed to be a never-ending supply of Bud. This is when I got word that the reason there was so much beer left over was that Canadians in those years believed the myth that American beer had very little alcohol content. Led by Emmett none of my Canadian relatives would drink the Bud, even though it was free, because they thought it was piss water. I am always reminded of this every time I now see Canadians buying and drinking Bud.

“ Dear Quinlan Clan: My sincere condolences for the passing of Uncle Emmett. Throughout my childhood, he was a fun, loving, jokester uncle. He loved people. He was always the life of the party. My last adventure with him was celebrating his 80th birthday at the Legion. He never missed a beat reminiscing about his younger, teenager days. The battle over how many pigs grandma had in the barn, will continue.
